Dear Parents

Last Tuesday the children were treated to a visit from renowned author and illustrator Martin Chatterton. His humorous and inspiring presentation delighted both keen and reluctant writers and readers as he appealed to their love of stories, through pictures and illustrations. His short tales and children's novels are well known, with popular titles such as: The Middle School and Bad Dog Series and Mort, a time travelling, 9,990 year old boy. Martin spoke of his love for storytelling from a young age and the many factors that influence his writing, ranging from his hometown of Liverpool to his keen interest in history. Some lucky boys and girls and even teachers were chosen to be models for his illustrations, even if it meant being turned into a kangaroo, a bird or a sword yielding queen. All illustrations will be on display in the library. At the end of the presentation, Mr Chatterton commented on how engaged the children were in learning about being an author and in the quality of their questions. He commended the school for such outstanding students. As a teacher it is really gratifying to see children so interested in Literacy, especially reading and writing. The pleasure in becoming engrossed in a really good book is such a gift and children often make the best referrals to each other.

But not all children have discovered a love for reading and composing. I can hear some parents ask, "but how can I encourage my child to love reading or to get away from the ipad screen?" To assist in answering this question I would like to share an article from the Washington Post which speaks about: How to get kids to look away from their screens and take pleasure in books Nora Krug, 28/8/17. I hope you find some of these ideas helpful.

God bless you and your family
Bernadette Fabri

ATTENTION ALL WRITERS!

Your teacher has asked you to help tidy the cupboards. Inside, you find an old wooden box marked
DO NOT OPEN!

You decide to take a peek. Inside, is one, solitary piece of chalk in a clear packet. On the back of the packet, it says
"Feeling hungry? Draw a sandwich. Watch it come to life, ready for you to devour. Want to know what dinosaurs looked like? Draw one and see what happens. Feeling bored and need a ball? Just draw one and it will appear before your very eyes."

The chalk is magic, alright!
Anything you draw becomes real!

Your task is to write a persuasive, informative or imaginative text about the magic chalk. Submit your composition to Mrs. Stojanovski (Kashian) by the end of Week 9.

How to get kids to look away from their screens and take pleasure in books

Nora Krug, 28/8/17

In the summer, there were lots of excuses: camp, the pool, the beach, lazy days when it didn't seem so bad if your kids were still in their pajamas and maybe watching a little TV or noodling around on an iPad. It was vacation, right? They'd read when school started. Wouldn't pressuring them lead to resistance? Now they're back in school and you're up against something perhaps even more daunting: homework. (Also, soccer practice, piano lessons, play dates and on and on.) How do you squeeze book-reading into this already overpacked schedule? More important: How do you help kids see reading as something separate from school, from testing, from work?

How do you foster a love of reading for pleasure?

The simple answer is to read — yourself, with and to your kids — whenever you can. Make books a part of your routine, your home decor, your conversations. It's true, those screens are ever tantalizing, but be strong and be prepared for a little light cajoling, time management and some inventiveness, especially when it comes to defining what it means to read a book.

Here are a few ideas from librarians and education experts:

Read your own book: When was the last time you sat down in your living room — right there, among the toys, the chaos, the mess, the children themselves — and read your own book for pleasure? If you're rolling your eyes right now, you're not alone. But put aside your skepticism and give it a shot.

"Children are generally extraordinarily curious and eager to read when they feel sufficiently motivated," says Erika Christakis, an early childhood educator and author of "The Importance of Being Little." "It's up to the adults to create environments at school and at home that ignite those impulses." That means, in part, reading yourself. Also, putting away your screen. "Why would children be motivated if every time they look up from a book, a parent is glued to a smartphone?" asks Christakis.

The bottom line: If kids see you read books for pleasure, they are more likely to do so, too. Also, you get to read a book!

Read aloud: "Remember, a child is never too old to be read a story. And you are never too busy to listen to a story read aloud by a child," says John Schumacher, a.k.a. Mr. Schu, ambassador of school libraries for Scholastic Book Fairs. When you read to children aloud, says James Trelease, author of the venerated "Read-Aloud Handbook," you are not only informing them, bonding with them and entertaining them, you are also "advertising the pleasures of reading." Trelease, who read to his own children until they were in ninth grade, adds that hearing a book increases comprehension and builds vocabulary: "If you've never heard a word, you'll never say it, you'll never write it and you'll never read it."

Make library visits a part of kids' routines: Librarians and teachers are the most common source for books-for-fun advice, according to the most recent Scholastic Kids & Reading Report. Even if kids are too shy to ask for help, who knows what great titles they might find just wandering through the shelves? (If you're concerned about a book's appropriateness, consult the librarian or check the Common Sense Media site.)

Let kids choose books freely: "Research shows that when kids get to choose their reading, they read more," says Karen MacPherson, the children's and teen services coordinator for the Takoma Park Maryland Library. According to one often-cited study, roughly 80 percent of children involved said the book they liked most was the one they had selected themselves.

Encourage kids to re-read books: "Young readers shouldn't necessarily be pushed into trying something new at home," Christakis says. "One of the best readers I know spent her childhood reading the 'Little House' book series in its entirety and then re-reading the books from start to finish all over again. She must have done this cycle 10 or 15 times, occasionally taking a break to read the 'Harry Potter' books. There are many worse ways to spend your childhood."

Allow kids to read at their level... "Adults tend to foist some of their reading anxieties on kids, which is counterproductive," Christakis says. "Parents of early readers often push their children to read texts that are simply too hard. Even reading a book at 95 percent accuracy (missing or not recognizing 5 percent of the words) is surprisingly distracting and demoralizing," she says. "Families should encourage kids to pick just-right books that are really comfortable for them and don't cause anxiety or a sense of slogging through."

It's not just about storybooks: A cookbook is a book, too, MacPherson points out. So are comic books and fun reference books like the Guinness Book of World Records and "Ripley's Believe It or Not." Even flipping through a magazine, an almanac, encyclopedia or dictionary (which has the added benefit of teaching kids how to alphabetize), can be a fun way of exploring books.

Open your family's ears to audiobooks: Whether you're on a long car ride or just hanging out at home, turn on an audiobook and fill those moments with a story. Audiobooks offer many of the same benefits as reading aloud, says Trelease — feeding vocabulary and stretching attention spans among them.

Have a "reading" meal: Pick a meal (or two) where everyone in the family is allowed to bring a book to the table and read to themselves as they eat, MacPherson suggests. It may make for a very quiet meal or a boisterous discussion session. Either way, it makes a special event out of reading.

Form a neighborhood book club: Reading isn't necessarily a solo activity. Creating a local book club of readers at similar levels can be a great way for kids to learn more about what their peers are reading, and to make reading a social event.

Let your children listen to podcasts: Kids can choose a straightforward storytelling podcast such as "StoryNory" or "Eleanor Amplified," or one that's more informational, such as "Wow in the World." Listening to podcasts can offer many of the same benefits as listening to audiobooks.

"There is a saying: 'If you don't like to read, you're doing it wrong,'" says Deborah Taylor, coordinator of school and student services at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore.

"I think that means the person hasn't connected with the right material," she adds, saying she's "relentless" with young readers. "If they tell me they don't like to read, I tell them I won't give up until I find their book, the one that will make them a reader."

This week we had a special visitor to St Patrick's to celebrate Book Week - Martin Chatterton and his wife Annie. Martin is the illustrator and writer of the famous Middle School and Mort series.

We enjoyed his humorous, clever performance and loved how he selected volunteers from the audience, who were unaware they were about to be drawn - but in a really funny and clever way. He drew Joshua. R and Crista Nicole in our session. It was fabulous to watch him work as an artist.

We were all disappointed that there wasn't enough time for us to get another picture drawn. Up until the end he made us all laugh - we could not take our eyes off him.

We all enjoyed his visit to the fullest and greatest extent and even became motivated to draw ourselves.

2017 Book Week / Literacy and Numeracy Week

Theme: "Escape to Everywhere"

Photo Display

Each child is asked to bring in a photo of themselves, 'Escaping to where they love to Read', showing themselves reading a book in an unlikely, unusual place—or from a different angle. This could be funny, serious or very creative depending on the place where they are reading or what they are reading. We would love to have these photos printed and ideally laminated if possible by Friday 1st September.

Classroom Portal and Photograph Stroll: Week 8 Thursday 7th September from 2pm to 3pm

Parents are invited to "Escape to St Patrick's" during Book Week and Literacy & Numeracy Week to view the results of our Book Week activities. This will not be a classroom visit but rather a 'stroll' with your child through the corridors of our school. Due to the walk through 3L will have their PE lesson on Friday 8th September instead.

Book Purchase and Dedications during Week 8

Please visit the library to purchase and dedicate a book for our library during Week 8. Monday - Thursday from 8.30 am - 9.00am and 3.00pm - 3.30pm. Many Thanks. Cash would be preferred.

Religious Literacy Assessment - Year 4

Dear Parents/Guardians,

This Term Year Four students have completed the Religious Literacy Assessment to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of Reconciliation and God's Forgiveness and Healing. As well as completing a written component, the students have also each completed a presentation of their choice to express their thinking creatively. Rather than selecting only a few students to present their learning at Assembly, the Year Four teachers and students would like to invite our parents and family members to visit the Year Four classrooms and view the wonderful and creative presentations designed and made by the students. We believe that this is a more purposeful and authentic experience for the students as they are all able to share their learning with an audience. We also believe that it is meaningful for the parents as it is important for you to have the opportunity to view and experience your child's learning journey.

We invite you to attend the Year Four Classrooms for our Religious Literacy Assessment Expo on Thursday 7th September 2017 (Week 8) between 2-3pm. Please note that the Open Classroom experience will be in place of the usual Friday afternoon Assembly. The Primary Awards for Week 8 will be handed out at the Friday Morning Assembly on the 8th September 2017 at 8:50am.

We look forward to you visiting and celebrating your child's learning.

Yours Thankfully

Mrs Anne Fardell, Mrs Eva Turkington and Mrs Louisa Daou

Movie Night 2017

Our annual Movie Night will be held on Friday Evening 15 September from 5.30pm when the gates open and food will be available to purchase. This year the students have voted to see Moana which will screen from 6.30pm. Over the next 2 weeks you will be able to pre purchase your tickets through the office.

Happy Birthday to the following children who will celebrate their birthdays in the following week:

Emily Johnson, Karabo Khama, Eddie Batti, James Kerr, Adrian Pangan

WEEK 10 - YEAR SIX

Museum Opening - All Year Six parents are invited to attend the Year Six Museum, showcasing the work the students have completed during their Project based learning time this term. (days to be confirmed)

NAPLAN READINESS ONLINE

Next week children in Years 3 and 5 will participate in the NAPLAN Readiness Online Testing. This testing is to check wifi and device capabilities and not children's literacy or numeracy levels. No student reports will be available.

There is a special website with further information including examples of NAPLAN Online and an explanation video on the following link.

MERCY DAY INCURSION

Mercy day is a day to remember the wonderful influence of an amazing woman - Catherine McAuley. This year our children will be attending a performance inspired by the life Catherine McAuley. The performance is titled 'A Bright Light in the Darkness' and will take place on Thursday 14 September.

There will be two performances throughout the day, both highlighting the the impact of Catherine McAuley on our faith. The first performance will be run for Years 3- 6 while the second performance has been amended to suit Kindy to Year 2.

It is hoped the students enjoy attending the incursion and develop a deepened understanding of the life and influence of an incredible Australian.

Woolworths Earn & Learn 2017

Total Points 6,840

We are now collecting the 'Earn and Learn' stickers. You will find sticker sheets in the office along with the box where you can either place a full sheet or individual stickers in the box.

Ask your grandparents, aunts & uncles, neighbours anyone that can help us to purchase educational resources. The more stickers we get the better resources we can buy.

Our goal is 30,000 and we are currently sitting at 6840.

CONFIRMATION

Last Friday a number of our students and ex students received the Sacrament of Confirmation at St Patrick's Cathedral. Congratulations to all the following children and their families.

Arwen-Cady Firmeza, Gabriella Cruz, Cyarra Fernandez, Julian Camenzuli, Geshua Toledo, Hamish McGlenn, Darcy Fraser, Clyde Guatlo, Allan Soso, Keenen Rosauo, Syrus Dig, Deo Cerillo

A special thank you is extended to all the boys and girls in the school choir who made this liturgy so very special by sharing your gift of song with the community.

ST PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL PARRAMATTA Euthanasia Petition - Say No to Euthanasia

The true mark of our humanity is witnessed in the steadfast care we give to those we love as they are dying. The New South Wales Parliament is likely to consider a private members Bill to legalise euthanasia and assisted suicide. If this is accepted it would radically abandon our deep human commitment not to deliberately take someone's life. Human dignity is honoured in living life, not in taking it. It is right to seek to eliminate pain, but never right to eliminate people. Euthanasia and assisted suicide represent the abandonment of those who are in greatest need of our love, care and support.

If you would like your voice heard, please sign the petition in the narthex. Due to time constraints, the petition needs to be finalised this weekend. In anticipation, thank you for your support.
